Why the court can deal with the case (jurisdiction)

The courts of England and Wales have residual jurisdiction, meaning either: no other court in any EU Member State has jurisdiction and either the Petitioner or the Respondent is domiciled in England and Wales; or (for same sex couples only) the Petitioner or the Respondent married each other in England and Wales, no other court in any EU Member State has jurisdiction, and it would be in the interests of justice for the court to assume jurisdiction in this case.

Other court cases that could affect jurisdiction

The applicant has given the following court cases which are related to the marriage, property or children.

"Insert proper text for the legal proceeding details"

Reason for the divorce

The marriage has broken down irretrievably, based on the fact that the respondent committed adultery with the co-respondent, and the applicant finds it intolerable (unbearable) to live with the respondent.

This is supported by the following statement from the applicant.

"Adultery Details"

Where the adultery took place

"On the street"

When the adultery took place

"Last Friday"

Additional applications
